1. Centralny Związek Spółdzielni Pracy (CZSP) is in charge of Poland's 3,000 producers' cooperatives, which produce 12 percent of the national output in industry, transport, and services. Only two cooperatives operate outside the CZSP administration: the Spółdzielnia Rolnicza, an agricultural cooperative which is subordinate to Centrala Rolnicza Spółdzielnia; and Spółdzielnia Mieszkaniowa, a housing cooperative which is subordinate to Centralny Związek Spółdzielni. 25X1
2. CZSP is subordinate to the Council of Ministers, and its offices are located in various places throughout Warsaw. The main offices are at No. 4 and No. 47 Zorawia Street. CZSP is headed by a president and about six deputies, and its organizational structure corresponds to that of a ministry. One of the most important administrative units is the technical division which includes eight or nine departments, each of which is in charge of one of the following branches of the cooperative sector:
 - a. Metal products.
 - b. Chemical products. This is an important branch, since much of the cooperatives' output is destined for military purposes.
 - c. Textiles.
 - d. Wood products.
 - e. Plastics.
 - f. Paper products.
 - g. Leather products.
 - h. Toys.
3. CZSP and its cooperatives employ 300,000 persons. Formerly there were about 500,000 persons employed but several cooperatives were merged or abolished and the administrative staff was cut. The greater part of the cut in manpower applied to hired workers, who constitute about 20 percent of the employees in the production sector.
4. The central research and planning office (Centralne Biuro Studiów i Projektów), which is directly subordinate to the CZSP president, is one of the CZSP institutions. It was established in 1954 for the planning and construction of new cooperatives and for the improvement of those already in existence. The office is located at
